ALBANY, Feb. 12. Senator Cantor's enumeration bill was the Important subject of to-day's debate in the Senate, to the great discomfort of the Republicans, who had not intended that it should ever get out of the Com-mittee on General Laws. But they were not very attentive to business yesterday, and only Senator Vedder of the majority attended the committee meeting. Fenators Cantor, Brown, and Chase were on hand, and when the first named made the motion, as he had at all of the other committee meetings, to report his bill, it was carried four to one. The Republicans were greatly disinclined to take their medicine. Senator Robertson tried to make a soint that the report was not that of a majority of the committee, and made a point of order that it could not be received without the congent of the Senate,

Senator Cantor calmly said that there was nothing in the record to show that the report vas not a majority one, and moved that the bill be ordered to a third reading, and made the special order for next Tuesday. Senator Fassett's objection and Senator Robertson's point of order did not avail to shut off Senator Cantor, as a motion to recommit made by Sena-tor Veilder came just in time to give him the chance he desired. He expressed his apprehension that the onject of sending the bill back to the committee was to kill it, and spoke at length on the constitutional requirement for the numeration and reapportionment of the State.

Senator Fassett saw that the majority was in for it and could not escape being pilloried before the public for its perfect and refusal to do justice to the people of the State. So he took the bull by the horns and moved an amendment that the committee be instructed to strike out the ensering clause. He started in to break the force of the points that he knew would be made against his position by decrying the methods employed to get the bill on the floor as perty peanut politics, an exhibition of low cunning and displaying neither stateeraft nor wisdom. But with all the heat of his resentment that a debute was precipitated on the question, he dropped the gracious admission that the Senator had a right to do it. His defence of the megerity was that they had twice passed an enumeration bill, which was retord by "the politician at the other end of the Capitol," "Oh, the magic of this enumeration question," he continued. "It turns men into petty, choese-paring politicians." Senator Studier (interrupting)-Will the Senator state what objection there can be to the passage of an enumeration bill? Senator Fassett-What good will it accomplish?

Senator Cantor-It will put this body in the attitude of obedience to a constitutional requirement.

Senator Fassett (dolefully)-Well, I suppose We may as well have this little contest out right The little contest developed into a battle royal, and it was nearly 3 o'clock when the

The little contest developed into a battle royal, and it was nearly 3 o'clock when the cannonading ceased and the smoke cleared away. A count of the dead included the bill, while a count of the wounded showed that they were mostly on the Republican side.

Senator Fassett opened the battle by an attack upon the Democracy, Gov. Hill, and Tammany itall. He tried to show that the Republicans were not responsible for the disregard of the constitutional provision for an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State in order that a fair apportionment of legislative representatives could be made.

Senator Cantor replied that the fact that two bills had been passed did not show that the majority had taken a single step toward the solution of the enumeration question or to bring about narmonious relations between the Legislature and the Executive on the constitutional question. He called attention to the difference between a census bill and an enumeration bill, and commended the Governor's veto of a bill whose provisions would have imposed an expense of over $500,000 on the State, while all the safeguards usually thown around the work were taken away, the County Clerks and local authorities ignored, and the injustice done to New York and Brooklyn of requiring their enumeration to be made in the summer, when 15 per cent, of their population were on vacation. He called upon the majority to pass a fair bill that the Governor could sign.

Senator Cantor then showed why this action seemed to indicate a desire to preserve a partisen advantage, especially when the Republicans, in the same pursuit of partisan advantage, especially when the Republicans, in the same pursuit of partisan advantage, especially when the Republicans, in the same pursuit of partisan advantage, especially when the Republicans in the matter of their ballot reform bill. He agreed with Senator Fassett and that the ma ortty does not propose to comply with the Coratiunton of the paper that the people can understand that the ma ortty does not propose to comply.

was just about as well that the subject should come up so that the people can understand that the malority does not propose to comply with the Constitution and give the people their rights. The Bould voters in his district, he said, were represented by one Assemblyman, while 5,000 voters up the State had the same representation. "Your obstruction of this bill," he added, "deprives hundreds off thousands of voters of representation in this Laria-Voters of representation in this Legis-Vote this bill down and you vote down lature. Vote this bill down and you vote down their fiber its."

Senator Fassett—How do you know that the Gevernor would sign it if we passed it?

Senator Cantor—I do not know, and I do not ears. If I perform my duty here under the Constitution I do all that my responsibility calls for.

Senator lyes offered an amendment that the Senator lyes offered an amendment that the Senator lyes of the report some bill providing for an enumeration on or before larch 15. He said the question of an enumeration was more important than the question of who is responsible for not having one. When the last one was taken New York, north of Central Park, did not have more than 10,000 in trail Park, did not have more than 10,000 in-habitants. Now she has 500,000, and in behalf of those people he asked for a new enumera-tion under which they could get the represen-tation to which they are envised. He said that a similar situation exists in some parts of lirookiyn. nator Fassett retorted sareastically that a similar situation exists in some parts of Brookiyn.

Senator Fassett retorted sarcastically that the senator did himself great logustice in assuming that the people of the upper part of New York ought to be better represented; but his tone grew bitter as he added. "I don't agree with the gentlemen on the other side that their party is suffering at all under the prosent arrangement. The party is doing quite well. It seems to be able to carry off a part, at gast, of the Republican Assembly."

Brooklyn's insufficient representation was next alluded to by Sonator McCarren. The last enumeration showed her population at 566,000, and her representation is on that basis yet, though her neople number nearly a million. Senator McCarren's comparison of his 48,000 constituency with Senator Vedder's 22,000 brought that gentlemen to his feet.

Senator Vedder advanced the proposition that a mere count of individuals was not the proper basis on which representation than others. He enforced this view by comparing his constituents of Chautsanjan and Cattaraugus, sun-browned and hard-handed, with those of New York districts. He used such expressions as "the lazzaroni of New York, with just enough of liberty and intelligence to vote as some boss tells them to: "The tenemoni population of New York with pust enough of liberty and intelligence to vote as along the man of the work with the semblance of manhood."

Senator that would tend to show that Tammany Hall was not true to its manhood.

Senator Fassett—I did not know that the Senator cared much about manhood, or that Tammany Hall had any use for it. Now, there are lots of splanuld fellowship belong to Tammany Hall. They are loyal to her. They are in senson and out of senson earnestly at work for her. They sustain her banners. They decry their opponents. They pursue them in season and out of senson. They tell lies about them, They subsidize people away from other parties. We may have some very interesting developments in this direction before long, swall developments in this direction before long, swall them. They subsidize people away from other parties. We may have some very interesting in this speech. The intimation that the Platt people are to take up cudgels for Johnny O'Brien is one thing, and another is the promise of interesting developments. Up here this makes folks suspect that Fassett's investigation committee will try to find out whether Tammany patronage or another smillar consideration influenced the sixteen Republican Assemblymen to vote against Platt on the World's Pair bill.

Senator Brown, in the light of experience as a resident of both country and city, assured the Senators that the odds in Isvor of honesty and morality, in propertion to the poulation, were overwhelmingly on the side of the city. Senator Fassett-We were anxious, and we Senator raeset. It is a bid to compel the Bemocracy in New York city to give you a share of patronage to which you are not entitled. It was only the other day, when the World's Fair bill came up before us, that the Senator from the Twenty-seventh was very anxious to make a partisan commission out of Senator from the Twenty-seventh was very anxious to make a partisan commission out of that, and why? It is politics with the amicus curiar of the Republican party, upon every subject of interest to the people. It is a rule or ruin policy. The people of the city of New York must be deprived of rapid transit unless it takes a commission from him. The city of New York must be deprived of this World's Fair because he has not sufficient representation. The people of the city of New York and other large cities of this State are deprived of a proper representation in the Legislature, for which the Democracy are asking you to obey the requirements of the Constitution.

Senator Fassett's motion to refer with instructions to strike out the enacting clause, was carried by a strict party vote—14 Republicans to 10 Democrats.

TWO BLOODY SHIRTS FOUND.

A New Theory as to How Murphy was Killed in the Berkeley Arms.

Tom's RIVER, Feb. 12.-Grocer Harris and Saloon Keeper Predmore were walking about the grounds of the Berkeley Arms Hotel late yesterday afternoon when the former discovered the two shirts worn by Jack Murphy when he was shot. One of them was of light gray woollen, and the other was a red flannel un-dershirt. Both were still wet with blood, and the shot holes showed where the charge had entered Murphy's side and penetrated his heart. After finding the shirts Harris determined to get into the house. He got a young man who could talk German to accompany him, that he might talk with the old man who had been placed in charge of the hotel by Mrs. Rosseau when she went away to seek ball for her husband. Postmaster Johnson of Ortley was in charge, however, and Harris got into the house without difficulty. When the young man told the old German that a man had been killed in the house, he was greatly alarmed and burst into tears. He said that Mrs. Rosseau had employed him for all next season. She found him at the house of his son-in-law. who lives on Twentieth street, New York, be-tween Fighth and Ninth avenues, She had said nothing whatever to him about the murder or suicide, and when he learned of them he rejused to stay in the house alone. He was penniless, or he would have gone away by the first train. His name is John Seeburger, and he begged Postmaster Johnson to send him home, saying he had heard strange sounds in the house the night before. To-day Presecutor Middleton, Sheriff Holman. Detective Hagaman, and a reporter went to the Berkeley Arms in a yacht. An investigation was begun at once. Murphy's room was first visited, but no letters were found. In his bureau were a partly worn suit of clothes and a small prayer book with a red binding. Writ-

Birst visited, but no letters were found. In his bureau were a partly worn suit of clothes and a small prayer book with a red binding. Written on a fly leaf was "Greenbridge, 146 West Twenty-first street." On another fly leaf, written in pencil, were the names of J. Woodruff, Frank Casey, John Gailagher, and Jenny Casey. There was also a letter blank from the Auditor's office of the Fennsylvania Railroad at Philadelphia, addressed to P. Murphy, and written in ink were the words: "Why don't you use care in making up your reports?" The shirts, prayer book, and some bits of wood containing blood were taken away by Sheriff isolman. The Sheriff was very particular to get a drop of coagulated blood from the dining-room door, which kisseau had said might be chicken blood. A hole about five inches from the floor in the hall, thirty feet from Roeseau's office, which Mrs. Roeseau had said might be chicken blood. A hole about five inches from the floor in the hall, thirty feet from Roeseau's office, which Mrs. Roeseau had told the Coroner's jury was a rat hole, was found to have been male by a discharge from a gun. A mouse trao had been near this hole, and it evidently had provented the jury from making a more careful examination. Detective Hagaman lighted a lump and then extracted a shot from the splinters, which he turned over to the Sheriff.

A new theory of the shooting was advanced to-day. It is that floeseau, becoming angry at Murphy, selzed the gun, and while Murphy was running down the back stairway losseau ran down the first stairway, reached the dining room first, and as Murrhy was trying to open the heavy outside door leading to the board walk where his body was found, shot him down. The fact that there is blood on only one of the folding doors of the dining room strengthens the theory that the other door was open, and that the shot might have been fired from within the theory promound for the folding room floors had not been opened since last beptember, and the remark may have led up to thothery just given. COLLECTING THE MISSING BONDS OF THE SIXTH NATIONAL BANK.

Mr. Jordan Expects to Restore Things to Their Original Shape-Cross-examining Mr. Mepburn-The Lenox Hill Settles, President Jordan of the Western National Bank told Commissioner Shields at the Classsen hearing yesterday that he had been "too busy" to prepare a statement about the bonds and other securities of the Sixth National Bank which were disposed of immediately after the bank was turned over to Claussen and his associates. The real reason why Mr. Jordan was not ready to make the promised statement in court yesterday was because he expects to be able to announce on Friday that every one of the missing bonds or the equivalent in cash has been restored to the bank by the men who took them out. Such was the report which obtained circulation yesterday, and diligent inquiry brought partial confirmation of it. It is further said that all of the three $60,000 leans made by Classen immediately after he got control of the bank have been taken up.

the bonds. In other words, the whole transaction will be cancelled by the return to everyhody of just what they had before. If this repayment of $450,000 by Leland to Chassen and his associates should not be made, then the combine would suffer a net loss of the amount less than that sum which Leand should turn over.

The situation which will be presented when Mr. Jordan makes his annuancement to-morrow will be an interesting one. He will tell Commissioner Shields in substance that every dollar and every bond is in the same place and ownership that it was in before Mr. Leland received an offer for his stock. The effect of this annuancement is what will most engress attention.

announcement is what will most engress attention.

tich. Foster cross-examined Bank Examiner Herburn at yesterday's session of the Chassen examination. His questions seemed to indicate that the theory of the defence will be that the abrust action of the Charing House Committee and the Bank Examiner in closing up the Nixth National Bank excasioned all the excitoment and loss. He tried to make Mr. Herburn say that on the day the bank was closed he had given Mr. Chassen an assurance that if he brought funds enough to cover the missing bonds by 9 octock the next morning all would be well. He intimated that Mr. Chassen would have done so but that Mr. Herburn shut him off by posting the notice of closure on the bank doors late that very night.

Mr. Herburn admitted that if the money had shut him off by posting the notice of closure on the bank doors late that very night.

Mr. Hepburn admitted that if the money had been brought around the next morning at 9 o'clock the bank would not have had to close, but he said that Claassen had said he could not get it till 11 o'clock, which was too late, and that they had separated without any understanding whatever. The hearing will be continued to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

The demands of the depositors at the Lenox Hill Bank were satisfied yesterday, and when the closing hour was reached no one stood outside the raving teller window. Nearly $120,000 has been paid to depositors since the bank reopened, but the institution stood the strain, and it is now again on a rock bottom basis—so say its new officers.

Evans it. Dick of Philadelphia has resigned from the Board of Directors of the Western National Bank. It is reported that his heldings of the stock of the bank have been purchased by Vice-President Canda. Mr. Dick, on being asked why he retired, said he had done so solely because he differed with the Board as to certain matters of policy only. The bank itself was in a flourishing condition, and was in no sense immaired as to its solvency by any of the recent bank troubles.

Mr. Delany is the gentleman who opposed the election of Grover Cleveland as an honorary member of the society and failing, resigned. It is thought by members generally that the Board of Trustees will refuse to accept Mr. Delany's resignation. He was one of the original incorporators of the society when it seeded from the Medico-Legal Society. But Grover Cleveland won't be dropped out now that he has got in. If Mr. Cleveland should request the withdrawal of his name from the honorary roll, however, that would end the matter.

HER BART DEAD IN HER ARMS. Romeless Mrs. Rines Had Been Walking the Streets With Mim All Night,

A sound of sobbing that came from a doorway on Fourteenth street, near Broadway, attracted the attention of a man who was hurry-ing along on his way to work shortly before daylight yesterday. He stopped, and, peering into the darkness, made out the form of a young woman clad in a thin dress, a black shawl, and a black felt bonnet. A baby lay in her arms. "He's cold." she said, with chattering teeth, in reply to the man's kindly inquiry. He was awake a little while ago, and was crying, but I guess he's sleeping now. Oh, don't wake him," she added, as the man put his hand on the baby's face. "I just came in here a mo-ment to nurse him. I've been walking the streets all night."

A gentleman connected with the Sixth National Bank said last evening that all but $10,000 or $7,000 of the missing bonds have now been returned and that this small balance would probably be turned over to-day by the brokers to whom they had been given to sell. This would make complete the restitution by Claussen and his associates of the securities of every sort which were taken from the Sixth National Bank. A broker who had handled some of the bonds said that he knew that extraordinary efforts had been made for a week past to frace and recover all of the securities which had belonged to the Sixth National Bank when Mr. Leland surrendered control of it. He belloved it had been accomplished. He had been told that the bonds as fast as recovered were turned over to Mr. Jordan and that he had returned them to the bank.

The return of the missing bonds, which amounted to about $430,000, would naturally be followed by the repayment to Mr. Leland paid about $200,000 to regain possession of his stock, for which he had received more than $650,000. Judge Patterson, in the Supreme Court, granted a writ of habeas corpus yesterday to Aaron Rosonovitz, who wanted to get his 11-year-old son, Elias, out of the Juvenile Asylum. Mine months ago the bey was arrested for having digarettes in his possession, but was discharged by a police magistrate. Rossonietz says that Agent kent of Mr. Gerry's society advised him to have the boy sent to the asylum for three months, telling him that the boy would be returned to him. Rosonovitz says he has tried to regain the boy, but cannot.

Looking for a Way to Preserve the Crumbling North Wall of the Building. When the building of the City Hall was begun in 1803 this city had not stretched much above the present site of the City Hall, and so the specifications called for a marble front and ends and a rear wall of brown stone, It didn't seem to matter what the rear wall was composed of, for nobody, it was thought, would posed of, for nobody, it was thought, would ever see it except strollers into the suburbs. But brown stone wasn't hardy enough to stand the storms of eighty-seven years, and for several years the stones have been gradually crumbling, until now the entire wall seems to be in danger of failing to tieces. Public Works Commissioner Gilroy personally inspected the wail yesteriny with Janitor Reese.

"I have been trying for some time to find a way of preserving the wail," said Mr. Gilroy, "and I confess that the matter troubles me. I think I shall have it painted white and sanded, so as to correspond as nearly as possible with the front wail."
